network-enabled software solutions enable schools to run smoothly from day one. school systems - even large, geographically dispersed ones - are typically built on antiquated legacy systems that fail to provide the functionality, reliability, security and performance needed for new and changing content. teachers and students can no longer cope with the constant crashes and delays that cripple the traditional it systems. the end result is that many schools struggle to teach and learn effectively - or at all. a school system's it infrastructure must be modern, flexible, and scalable, with standardised and centrally managed processes that can be changed and updated easily. as a result, the e-learning programs in school are largely ineffective and fail to reach their full potential, because they are stuck in a slow-moving it environment. in addition, the cost of updating this antiquated infrastructure can be prohibitive, and, most importantly, very disruptive to the day-to-day operations of the school. in addition to the features already mentioned the central management features include a full time presence, course resources, an extensive event log, and the ability to print staff and student schedules. the resource manager can be used to manage the school or classroom resources such as software, networks, printers, and other resources. the solution to this problem is the web collaboration server. the web collaboration server provides a standardised user experience, enabling users to share documents, present content and applications, and work together on a single, secure, collaborative workspace. this web collaboration server solution is embedded in netsupport manager and, once installed, it provides a range of pre-configured services that are designed to work seamlessly with the netsupport manager solution. by consolidating collaboration services, the solution provides an efficient and cost-effective solution to schools that want to move away from the costs associated with maintaining an in-house solution.
